FRANCE DOES
HONOR TO GEORGE WASHINGTON

the accomplishment of our freedom, to place within those walls the statue of the "father of his country."

Speaking of Washington, Mr. Mann said:

"Grand as he was in war, he was grander still in peace, and to him above all others is due the adoption of the constitution which welded the states together into that form of government which became the pattern of future republics."

"Courteous and courteously to all men, a tender affection characterized his intercourse with his friends. Lafayette's heart went out to him in filial love; Rochambeau held him as a dearly beloved brother in arms; De Gresse admired him and was glad to call him a friend; Chastellux declared him to be the greatest and best of all men while his own people with one accord have proclaimed him "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

In glowing terms, Mr. Mann referred to Lafayette and the affectionate regard in which Americans held his memory.

"No name in all the history of our revolutionary period, save only that of Washington," said Mr. Mann, "is so dear to the American people as that of the gallant young Frenchman, who before he had reached the age of twenty became a major general in the army of the United States, having tendered his services as a volunteer without compensation or allowance."

Before the constitution was adopted Lafayette had been by legislative act declared a citizen of Virginia, the highest honor a free state can pay any man; and upon his death by order of the president of the United States the same honors were rendered by the nation as had been observed on the death of Washington.

"His love for our state was touchingly shown when he named a daughter Virginia. And I am proud to relate that when offered his choice of commands in the continental army he selected a division composed entirely of Virginians. It was he, at the head of his division of brave Virginians, who drove Cornwallis into the untenable position at Yorktown and held him there until the coming of Washington and Rochambeau by land, and of De Grasse and St. Simon by sea. Cornwallis has said of him: 'The boy cannot escape me; but it was due to the splendid strategy of the boy that the entire British army on the glorious October day in 1781 was forced to march out in humble submission between the lines of French and Americans and laid down its arms.'"

Mr. Mann related how a Frenchman had been chosen to perpetuate the form of the illustrious Washington in imperishable marble.

"The war drums of the revolution had hardly ceased to sound before the new born state of Virginia voted a statue to Washington," he said. "Desiring to honor the greatest of her sons, she knew when she enshrined in the place of highest honor in her capitol, that splendid figure of a man, that she was handing down to generations then and now unborn an inspiration that would redound always to the good of the commonwealth."

Jefferson, author of our Declaration of Independence and later president of the republic, then in France, selected for this great work that illustrious French sculptor, Jean Antoine Houdon, whom he declared to be without rivalship, the first statuary of the age. Houdon visited America and at Mount Vernon, where he was entertained with that courteous hospitality which distinguished the home life of Washington, he studied thoroughly his subject, took accurate measurements and even made a mould of his face. Returning to France, yonder in your beautiful Paris, worked patiently and with consummate skill, Houdon fashioned in marble the perfect statue which was described by Lafayette as a fac simile of Washington's person.

"It is accepted as the standard and one perfect likeness of Washington, truer than any portrait the best artist could produce; as a work of art it surpasses any statue in America; its value to my people cannot be measured in gold, or in silver, or in precious stones. It is a beautiful bronze copy of this statue that we have brought to you on behalf of the people of Virginia."

CURLEY GRAHAM
COMES THROUGH A SECOND OPERATION

"Am feeling fine today. Final and critical operation will be performed tomorrow at 8 o'clock. You and Ed know my business only. So long."

This was the wording of a dispatch received early yesterday morning by Bob Haviland, Curly Graham's Tonopah partner. Later in the day another message was received from the doctors at Santa Cruz stating that Curly had come through the operation all right, but was very weak. Nothing more has been heard, so acting on the old saw "that no news is good news," the best is hoped for. At the Santa Cruz sanatorium Curly is under the care of Dr. H. E. Piper, formerly of this city.

ADJOURNMENT TAKEN IN STATE BANK CASE

An adjournment was taken in the State Bank case yesterday afternoon until the 4th day of October. The adjournment was taken by mutual consent of attorneys on both sides of the question. The case is one which is being bitterly fought and which is taking a large amount of time.

Judge Langan in granting the adjournment which is asked for by Judge Massey that he might attend to the duties incumbent upon him as a candidate of the people for nomination for governor, stated that he had no objection to the granting of the same if it was the wish of the attorneys. He then set a date in the early part of September, but Attorney Peck found that the day set would conflict with a case that he had on hand and a later date was then named. Judge Massey objected to this date as it conflicted with arrangements that he had made, so the date of October 4th was then agreed upon.—Carson News.

DEMOCRATS HOLD
FIRST MEETING
LAST EVENINGMINERS HALL COMFORTABLY
FILLED TO LISTEN TO VA-RIOUS CANDIDATES.

A fair audience, among which was a considerable sprinkling of ladies, was present at Miners' Exchange hall last night on the occasion of what might be termed the first public meeting of the democrats.

Hon. Clay Tallman, state senator from Nye county, was selected as chairman of the meeting, and after a few introductory remarks he introduced Gilbert Ross, one of the candidates for lieutenant governor, who made a brief talk, telling that he had just returned from the north where had been for the past few weeks, and that the democrats of that section were lined up in good shape for victory.

Mr. Ross was followed by Chas. S. Sprague, one of the democratic candidates for congress. Mr. Sprague's talk was of about twenty minutes' duration, in which he outlined the course he would follow if elected, and his remarks were enthusiastically received by the democrats present.

CHARLES S. SPRAGUE
Candidate for Representative in Congress.

Mr. Tallman then addressed the meeting for a few minutes and wound up his remarks by gracefully introducing Hon. Ray Pittman of Tonopah, one of the candidates for the United States senate. Mr. Pittman made a forcible talk from his viewpoint and severely criticized the methods of Senator Nixon. He was at the height of his delivery when the alarm bell gave notice of the fire on South street, and in a short time the hall was nearly emptied, only a few remaining to hear the remainder of his speech.

The Tonopah Military band was in attendance on the meeting and between remarks discoursed patriotic airs.

MAKES RICH FIND OF CINNABAR ORE

WINNEMUCCA, Nev., Aug. 18.—Dick Brennan, a veteran prospector who has followed the trail in many states, is in town from the camp of Washakie. In speaking of that district he stated that the section looks good to him and he has made a permanent camp there.

Since arriving there he has located a number of claims and has finished the "cinch" work on them. He says that in Grand Trunk canyon he has uncovered what has the appearance of being a very large deposit of cinnabar. He was prospecting a large dyke from which he was getting pannings of gold, when he found the cinnabar deposit. Throughout the whole district, says Mr. Brennan, there are many ledges showing ore carrying good values.

MAKING STRONG CANVASS

William L. Hacker, a young miner of Round Mountain, who is seeking endorsement for the legislative assembly before the democratic primaries, has been in Tonopah the past two days working in the interest of his candidacy. He leaves this morning for the Bullfrog country. Mr. Hacker has many friends in Nye county who will do their best to gratify the young man's ambition and try and send him to the legislature.

GOT SIXTY DAYS.

William Dragonich, arrested and brought back from Coaldale a few days ago and charged with attempting to leave the country with the purpose of defrauding his creditors, was before Judge Atkinson for examination. After listening to the evidence pro and con the justice adjudged the defendant guilty and sentenced him to serve sixty days in the county jail.
